Chinese Minister at Washington Wears Rich Raiment at Functions

ons. Minister Chang is rather slight and is about ...e feet seven inches high. It will thus be seen that his size s not imposing and that he must rely on his garb to attract attention. His clothing does all this and more. The diplomat is fifty years old, but looks younger in spite of the air of a student that is habitual with him. Mr. Chang is avowedly a believer in the United States and in western civilization. His son recently was graduated from a Philadelpha law school, and his two daughters are finishing their education in Washington. The minister hopes to see American educational methods introduced in his own country.

Some Capital Gossip

Washington D.C. Mar. 31 Editor Eagle,

The Congressional party, inhas been completed.

The Committee on Committees of the House has put in the time to such purpose that committees will be announced early in the extra session. The new system now will prevent confusion in the matter of reorganizing the House, but bitterness over chairmanships is already said to have cropped out in several places. Camposing the Committee on Rules has been the hardest task.

According to the best information to be had in advance. Reciprocity will pass the House early in the session. There is no disposition to delay possible tariff legislation. With Recriprocity out of the way, revision of the tariff schedules will be promptly taken up.

The fight over Recriprocity will be made, as before, in the Senate. In that body the contest tion. Will sell at a bargain if ta-syndicate the idea of building a may be prolonged, but there is little doubt that it will eventually pass. Inaurgent Senators are said to be prepared with long speeches. They are not all for the bill, though it embodies the policies they have been fighting for a long time.

There will be a great struggle when the woolen schedules are reached in the House. The strongest emphasis has been laid by the Democrats on the necessity of revising these schedules at once. General tariff revision will depend largely on what is done with the woolen schedules.

Steel Ski Hill In Wisconsin Towers Into the Air 118 Feet

MERICANS are beginning to show almost as much interest in ski tournaments as is shown in Norway, from whence the sport comes. Already there are slx "ski hillis" in this country, the longest and finest having just been dedicated at Stonghton, Wis. This "hill" is really an incline supported on steel towers. The platform at the extreme top is 118 feet from the ground, and the slide drops at a steep incline a distance of 207 feet to the "bump" or jumping place, which is fifteen feet above the ground. The platform is seventeen feet higher than any other ski hill ever constructed, and the slide is also steeper than any other in existence. The jumpers who have the temerity to slide down this icy incline will attain a speed of seventy or eighty miles an hour, and after leaving the "bump" will fly 140 or 150 feet through the air to land in a pile of soft snow. The American record for a jump is 140 feet, while the Norway record is 168 feet. The cut shows the new hill at Stoughton with a skl jumper in flight in the corner.

Red Headed Okapi, Related to The Giraffe, Coming to America

ISITORS to the Museum of Natural History in New York will soon have an opportunity of looking at specimens of the okapi, an animal rare that hunters who have visited its native haunts in the Kongo have not seen it. Fren Henry M. Stanley, who first heard of wable to get sight of one, though he spent years in can jungie. The natives told him about the "red headed horse" that a body like a giraffe's and the legs of a zebra. When Stanley returned to civilization he published these stories and caused considerable excitement among scientists and naturalists. Sir Harry Johnston went to Africa in 1901 for the London Zoological society and spent many months in the Kongo region. He was muchle to get sight of the okapi, but he bought a portion of a skin and two skulls from natives. He later made another trip to Africa and saw one of the animals alive, though he was unable to kill or capture it. He made such an accurate description of it, however, that he gave his name to the animal. Two years ago the New York Museum of Natural History sent an expedition to the Kongo, and a cablegram has just been received saying that specimens of the maie, the female and the calf okapi have been killed and the skins and skeletons shipped to New York. Trees and shrubs have also been shipped, and the animals will be mounted in a lifelike manner and will be shown as they appear in their native jungle.

Bronze Bust Shows Carnegie In Rector of University Robes

Copyright by J. Massey Rhlnd.

NDREW CARNEGIE in bronze-that is, J. Massey Rhind, the well known New York semptor, has modeled the frommaster in clay and replicas beve been east in bronze. Mr. Rhind had a number of sittings before the bust was sympleted, and when it was finished the result was highly pleasing to Mr. Carnegle and his friends. They called it a perfect likeness, and the cut printed above shows that it possesses much character. Mr. Scotland, he being the first American who ever held that honored office. Admirers of Mr. Carnegie have bought copies of the bust and have presented them to fibraries which have been given to schools and municipalities by the philanthropist. The bust is preferred by many to a painting as being at the same time more lifellke and more enduring.

It represents a mill on a terrace, the miller mounting the stairs with a sack of grain on his back, a horse and cart standing near, and a group of peasants in the road at a littie distance.
